Dear Friend:

Among the writer's duties on the staff of the Lavelle School for the Blind, is the preparation periodically of a little paper called "The Sight-Giver" intended to interpret our work for our friends. The school is devoted to the education and training of sightless children between the ages of three and sixteen years.

I enclose several copies of our little paper herewith from which you will note that Arthur Guiterman, Faith Baldwin, Fannie Hurst, Helen Keller and many others have already contributed to our columns.

Could you find it in your heart to send me a little poem, or a story of 800 words or less, in which a blind child would have a part, for inclusion in a forthcoming issue? The prestige of your name would mean so much to us.

With unending gratitude for your help and trusting it may be our privilege some day to have you at the School where we can show you at first hand the wonders that are being accomplished, I am
