Dear Miss Mistral:

The University of Syracuse Department of Romance Languages in association with notable scholars and literary men of several countries issues twice yearly Symposium, a literary journal in the field of modern languages and literatures.

From time to time, we publish original writings by distinguished contemporary writers, our latest contribution in this field being six unedited poems of Andrée Berry.

We should like very much to receive a contribution by so distinguished a poetess as yourself and, therefore, wish to take this opportunity to invite your collaboration. I am sending you separately the latest issue of Symposium, so that you may see for yourself the type and quality of the scholarly and original writings contained in it.

Most sincerely yours,

Ernest R. Moore
