Dear Miss Mistral:

Here at Peabody I have begun a research paper on your life and works. I am a great admirer of yours and regret that the material available is so limited. Your poetry (that which has been translated) is so beautiful and stirring that one cannot but live with you through them. My research has been limited but very profitable.

Since this paper is to be a term project, it would be the greatest pleasure and the greatest honor that I have ever received if you could find it possible to write a short note telling something about yourself or your work, which I could include in this paper. It is probably too much to ask, but if it be possible, I should be very grateful and will reimburse for all mailing expense involved.

My sincere appreciation to you for any considerations, a note or an autographed photograph would be beyond my wildest dreams.

(my paper is due August 10, 1950)

Very sincerely yours,

Josephine Curto
