My precious dear:

Looking over old letters and papers last night, I came across this little book which is a record of a transaction that took place a long time ago. However, I think you might like to have the book. There was no paper connected with it - just this little book. I presume I gave you at the time any papers that were with it.

I wrote you a few days past because Felicitas Klimpfel, who brought me a letter from a common friend in Chile, told me she knew you were here and she was going to see you in a day or so. I hope she was right and that she did have the chance to meet you.

Did you stay long in the South? Was the warmer climate helpful to you? I hope so.

My greetings to your good friend, Doris, and as always, all my love to you.

Pardon the dictated letter.
