My dear unknown friend,

It was a very great disappointment to me to hear that your trip to Washington had to be given up and therefore that I could not welcome you to my home in Baltimore.

I have been waiting eagerly to hear the outcome of your conference with Miss Eda Ramelli about the translations of your poems which I sent you. And also I hope you will tell me about what has been done about translation of your poems in Washington. Will that interfere with the book of translations of your poems which I am working on now? I hope not!

As I wrote in my last letter, I sent to your agent, Ann Watkins, Inc. in New York a number of the translations. She acknowledged
