Dear Miss Mistral:

Thank you for referring to me the two letters from Robert B. Abbott about Dutch rights for your works. I have talked to Mr. Abbott, and he is under the impression that PRAYER OF A MISTRESS is a book title and not just the title of a poem. The Dutch house that is interested in publishing you was active in the Underground during the war and apparently is reliable, but, before I can act on your behalf, would you be good enough to ask your secretary to let me know those of your titles which have been sold in Holland and those which are free.

We have no copies of any of your works, but I am advertising for them in the Publishers Weekly, and I hope we will be able to obtain a complete set.

Yours sincerely,

The prayer of kindness is a short article in front not the name of a book. Devotion my books are.

I haven't been here - I believe you would offer them a story about me. I believe you would offer them an article from me each three months - before leading. I suggest we to write To inquire if the international issue of "Life" magazine is permanent and if it is to be published then with some of it
