Dear Miss Mistral:

Miss Turnbull has again sent me her translations, corrected this time, of poems from three of your works. I am sending them to you herewith, knowing that you will want to take advice from someone near you and in whom you have complete confidence. I hope you will be able to tell me to go ahead and find a publisher for these or to say that Miss Turnbull is not qualified to be your official translator.

My kind regards go to you, with the hope that I may see you in New York this autumn or this winter.

Sincerely yours,

Armitage Watkins
