Re: Gabriela Mistral

Gentlemen,

We have been wondering why we had not heard from you since writing to you last on December 30. Going over our files I find no evidence that the contracts discussed in my letter were sent to you and perhaps this is the explanation for your silence.

In order not to lose any more time we are enclosing three copies of the contract made out in accordance with our previous correspondence. If you are at all interested in pursuing the publication project, please, return all of them to us with your initials and signatures. We further wish to draw your attention once again to the fact that Miss Dena, the Executrix of the Estate, requests that she be given the opportunity to read the introduction by Dr. Wijdeveld.

We are holding for you a photograph of the author and photographs of 10 pages of handwritten manuscript suitable for reproduction. Upon receipt of the signed contracts we shall be glad to send you this material.

Sincerely,
