Dear Miss Daves:

Your letter of May 2, 1961, is the first news we receive in reply to ours of May 30, 1960, which we addressed to Miss Margaret Bates, concerning the suggestions about the corrections to include eventually in a new edition.

However, this does not mean that this second edition is going to be published in a short delay, as we have still a few thousands copies of our first edition in stock. But, following to our custom of preparing carefully and at leisure our editions, we have read with most interest which you tell us.

We are agreeable to numbering the verses in the margin of the edition. We also agree to include Margaret Bates' brief introductory notes; please therefore send us the definitive text of them.

There is also no inconvenient in principle in changing the prologues and in including now the one written by Miss Esther de Cáceres. Please send it to us.

Looking forward to hear soon from you, we are,

Sincerely yours,
