Dear Doris:

I think the books must have reached you by now. That aspect of things is taken care of by one of the administrative secretaries, but I did check to be sure they were going out immediately. My own secretary has sent copies to Francisco Aguilera and Margaret Bates and to Howard Cline's wife and daughters. I also sent a copy to Marta with a note. Do let me know if I have overlooked anyone who was my responsibility. Your copies, Antonio's, and Joan's are covered by the contracts and so go out from the front office.

I think that's all the business I have to transmit at the moment, though I should tell you that Elias Rivers, of the Hopkins Spanish Department, was asked to review the book for the Modern Language Association book club and that his review was a rave one; I believe he is also going to review it for the journal MLN. But you will be hearing more about that sort of thing from Lisa.

Now to a personal note. I simply want to say again how much deep pleasure working on this book and with you has given me. And that is apart from the pride I feel in it as Hopkins' Humanities Editor.

Sincerely,

(Miss) Margot Schutt
Humanities Editor
