1. The first step in the process of the development of a new product is the identification of a market need. This is done by conducting market research, which involves gathering information about the target market and its needs. The next step is to develop a concept for the new product, which is then refined through a series of iterations. The third step is to develop a prototype, which is used to test the product's feasibility and to gather feedback from potential customers. The final step is to launch the product into the market, which involves marketing and distribution efforts.

Explain the value of the χ^2 test in the context of the data.
