

Joyce

Paraphrasing a Euripides him, James Joyce James relies on the honorific Ireland, but he leaves course to Trieste, a Paris, a Zurich, where married in 1940.

"Dangerous to abandon the patria, but more dangerous even to return, because then the compatriots, if they can, will be in a position to clarify my position in the 'crisis' of the world, the first and last of the present era, and part of the events of "Dubliners", my first book, were written in Trieste, ~~written in Trieste~~ ~~written in Trieste~~ and published - recently - in 1944.
is clear, given the years in elaboration of the work, the first and last of the present
~~written in Trieste~~ and published - recently - in 1944.
