Monday, 7/20:

Dorees: No, I haven't called Natalie, and I am very sorry to admit this. I will call her, though, as soon as I get away from this place in August, and feel more like offering somebody a something to lean on. I expect I was relieved to hear she was holding together and the urgency passed.

What I have on my mind very much is Gabriela for a book for our 25th (1971). Several book plans have fallen apart, and I think, for many reasons, that it would be fitting for her writings to mark that milestone.

I would like to do it as an extension of the LIFE piece--20 poems, perhaps, would do it. My Chile pictures and perhaps others of Latin children, and a chapter or introduction on Gabriela and the home town--with the pictures you showed me, color.

I have mentioned it to "my" publishers--John Day--and they want very much to know more of the possibilities. They could get it done for next year if we can get it in shape in the next few months.

Please! To let me know, if you can, yes or no before too long. Best to Varga, Mrs. Varga and you.
