Easter Sunday,
April 21, 1957,
Near Princeton.

Miss Doris Dana,
204 East 20th Street,
New York City.

Dear Miss Dana:

I was thrown back a bit by the casting of my SIMPLY HEAVENLY play which went into rehearsal last week for an off-Broadway production in May, so brought all the Mistral poems out here to the country where, high in a quiet hilltop house, I can work in peace. Two very nice Latin American students at Princeton came out this afternoon to help me with the idioms. So when I come back to town this week, I shall have some thirty or more translations to show you. And Mr. Perry wishes me to discuss with you the matter of the introduction, since MacLeish seems unavailable. Have you any further ideas? Would Benjamin Cohen of the United Nations perhaps be good? At any rate, I hope to see you soon.

With cordial regards,

Sincerely,

Langston Hughes
