Miss Doris Dana,
Roslyn Harbor, L. I.
New York, N. Y.

Dear Miss Dana:

I received your letter today and also one from Gabriela Mistral, saying that she was leaving for Canada. I am sending you copies of my translations of some of her poems although I shall not be able to have many published if the fee is $25 each. As I may have explained in one of the letters that seem to have been lost, I am having to pay for the publication of one anthology and shall probably not be reimbursed for half the amount I am paying for publication. The other anthology may be published by the University of Missouri; if so, I receive only one hundred copies to dispose of as I like. I shall have to send most of those to poets or heirs who have permitted me to use their poems, as I have been asked to pay for the rights to use the works of only one poet, but have been asked for copies of the anthologies.

As I am a woman sixty years old and my only income is from teaching I can not afford to spend much more than what I have already spent and the costs of publication. If the one anthology should be accepted by a publishing house and I should receive royalties I should be glad to pay generously.

Since I wish to send my translations right away I have not selected the particular poems I feel most valuable for my work, but am sending all.

I shall appreciate any suggestions you may have

Yours very truly,
Mildred E. Johnson
