Miss Doris Dana,
Roslyn Harbor, L. I.
New York

Dear Miss Dana:

After sending my translations of the poems of Gabriela Mistral to you last week I found I had left out one, so am sending it now, although as I told you then, it seems a rather hopeless undertaking. I was informed by a reliable source in Chile that Miss Mistral never charged for using her poems, and as the other poets had been so gracious in giving their authorizations, I was frankly quite disappointed on receiving your letter. If she insists on that charge, perhaps I can choose one or two, of course on the condition that you approve of my translations.

Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain

Yours sincerely,

Mildred E. Johnson
