Miss Doris Dana,
Long Island-New York

Dear Miss Dana,

AS I have not heard from you since sending you copies of my translations of some of Gabriela Mistral's poems, I am writing again to inquire whether you and she approve of my translations. As I said before, I can not afford to use many at $35 a poem, and the number and the choice of specific ones would depend on who does the publication with the consequent expenditure I should have to make.

I should appreciate a statement of your decision regarding my translations, so I might know whether to include her works in my anthology, or anthologies.

I do not know where Gabriela Mistral is at the present time and can reach her only through you.

Yours very truly,

Mildred E. Johnson
