Mildred E. Johnson
Niedermeyer Apts.
Columbia, Missouri

Dear Mrs. Johnson:

It seems that you never received my letter written to you from New York last February. Unfortunately the copy of it is in my files in Roslyn Harbor, but the content of it is more or less as follows.

Miss Mistral feels that the publication of translations of her very early works, such as the ones you selected for your anthology, would not be of interest to the American reader, and also would be misleading as they are not representative of the main portion of her work.

She wishes to thank you especially for your interest in including her in your anthology, as well as for all the effort you invested in the translation of the poems. She sincerely regrets that she had to decline your kind offer.

Sincerely yours,

Doris Dana
