Dear Madame Pomes:

Inquiries have established that a new edition of POEMS BY GABRIELA MISTRAL have appeared in print published by Editions Pierre Seghers, and that you have a contract with Stock in which you have represented yourself as the sole copyright owner of the material in these books.

Gabriela may have authorized the printing of your excellent translations, but she always told me that both in the case of the translations by Roger Caillols and your translations, she had never assigned the copyright of the basic material.

As Literary Executrix for Gabriela's Estate, I must request a photostatic copy of the original document that Gabriela signed. You will realize that my responsibility to Gabriela's Estate, as well as to Gabriela herself, prompts this request. I have been urged to take legal steps, but do not wish to do so until checking with you, since I feel there must be some misunderstanding. I would appreciate hearing from you as soon as possible about this matter.

I shall be in Spain towards the end of 1965, and will go to France, to straighten out this matter with the various publishing companies. I shall look forward to meeting you personally at that time.

Thank you for all your kind comments about myself, and your continuing interest in, and devotion to Gabriela Mistral. Hoping to hear from you in the near future,

With kind personal regards,

Doris Dana
