Dear Miss Dana:

I received your letter from Napello with the "terms."
Esra Round tells me that the Hudson Review which is interested in translating these poems of Gabriela will make "no pleas on account of poverty or charity"; your "invariable" terms will be met.

Six poems have been sent to the Hudson Review. They are all from Fale:

Wall	Wind (already sent to you)
Giving Water	Absence
Bread	Memory of the Divine

I am sending three translations in this letter. "Absence" and "Memory of the Divine" were lent to a friend with another group of translations--I was sure I had copies--but I shall send them to you as soon as I can,
I hope before you get to New York.

I hope this letter finds you well and also that you left Gabriela in good health. If you intend to be in Washington I should very much enjoy seeing you.

Very sincerely yours,

Margaret Bates

P. S. I see that I didn't make it clear in my letter that these poems have not been accepted yet by the Hudson Review; they were sent in about a week ago.
