Dear Doris:

I enclose the answer to the query I made regarding the publication of the critical edition. Castalia does very good work typographically and asks a very high price for the critical editions I have seen; to my knowledge it is the only publishing house in the Spanish speaking world that has a series of critical editions, Ediciones Críticas.

In the note I sent Castalia I asked if they would be interested in the critical edition of Desolación. What I had in mind was the edition of both Desolación and Ternura since the same poems are included in both at different times. That would be roughly pages 1-373 in the Aguilar edition; the notes would be from my Cotejo... of which you have a copy.

I would like to hear from you before acknowledging receipt of the Editorial Castalia letter of December 16, 1966.

Sincerely,

Much love
M.B.
