Re: MISTRAL

Dear Doris:

I am so sorry to report that the pending British deal with Martin Secker & Warburg has fallen through. The problem seems to be the manufacturing cost -- I am sending you photostats of the pertinent correspondence which will give you some information.

I shall make further efforts to get a British publisher to take on some copies, but as you can see, it is not going to be an easy matter. The royalty negotiated was no problem; it was the production price that was too high. This, in the opinion of the British publisher, would price their edition out of the market.

Love,

Joan
