

A detailed, hand-colored map of the state of Wisconsin, showing its geographical features, major cities, and a network of roads or railways. The map is oriented vertically on the page. The state's outline is clearly defined, with various regions shaded in different colors like green, yellow, and red. A dense network of red lines crisscrosses the state, likely representing a railway or road system. Major cities and towns are marked with black dots and labeled. The map is set against a light background, and the edges of the paper are visible.
