The language is Russian. It is noted, too, however, that the author's knowledge of the Russian language is not perfect, and that the author's knowledge of the Russian language is not perfect.

On comparing these two cases, it appears that the two processes are not identical. The first process is a simple, direct, and linear one, while the second is a more complex, indirect, and non-linear one. The first process is a simple, direct, and linear one, while the second is a more complex, indirect, and non-linear one.

As it stands, it is not possible to identify the relationship between the two variables, because the direction of the relationship is not clear. The relationship is not clear because the direction of the relationship is not clear.
