

Introduction

Assessing gender norms from within households in the private sector in India

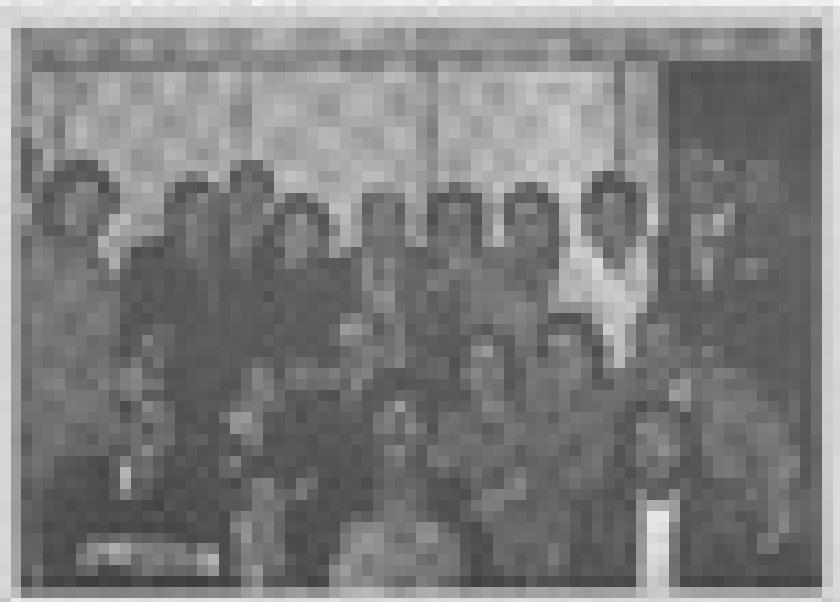

Figure 1. Group photograph of respondents from the private sector in India.

Background

In most countries, there are significant differences between men's and women's roles in the household and the community. In India, the gender gap is particularly large. Women are less likely than men to have access to basic services such as education and health care, and they are less likely to have control over their own lives. This is true both within the family and in the wider society. Women are less likely than men to be involved in decision-making at home and in the community. They are also less likely to be involved in the labor force, and when they are, they tend to be employed in lower-paying jobs. These gender differences are reflected in the way that men and women are treated within the household and the community. For example, men are more likely than women to be involved in decision-making at home, and they are more likely to be employed in higher-paying jobs. They are also more likely to be involved in the community, and they are more likely to be involved in political activities. These gender differences are reflected in the way that men and women are treated within the household and the community.

In India, the gender gap is particularly large. Women are less likely than men to have access to basic services such as education and health care, and they are less likely to have control over their own lives. This is true both within the family and in the wider society. Women are less likely than men to be involved in decision-making at home and in the community. They are also less likely to be involved in the labor force, and when they are, they tend to be employed in lower-paying jobs. These gender differences are reflected in the way that men and women are treated within the household and the community. For example, men are more likely than women to be involved in decision-making at home, and they are more likely to be employed in higher-paying jobs. They are also more likely to be involved in the community, and they are more likely to be involved in political activities. These gender differences are reflected in the way that men and women are treated within the household and the community.

Gender norms and their impact

Una vida dedicada a la poesía [artículo] Enrique Gajardo Velásquez.

Libros y documentos

AUTORÍA

Gajardo Velásquez, Enrique, 1923-

FECHA DE PUBLICACIÓN

1995

FORMATO

Artículo

DATOS DE PUBLICACIÓN

Una vida dedicada a la poesía [artículo] Enrique Gajardo Velásquez. retr.

FUENTE DE INFORMACIÓN

Biblioteca Nacional Digital

INSTITUCIÓN

Biblioteca Nacional

UBICACIÓN

Avenida Libertador Bernardo O'Higgins 651, Santiago, Región Metropolitana, Chile