

Clinton Announces New Initiative to Improve Education in Inner-City Schools

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9 — President Bill Clinton today announced a new initiative to improve education in inner-city schools. The initiative, called the "Clinton Education Initiative," will focus on improving the quality of teaching and the curriculum in schools that serve low-income students.

The initiative will be implemented through a series of grants to local school districts. The grants will be used to hire more teachers, improve teacher training, and develop new curriculum materials. The initiative will also provide for the development of new teacher certification programs and the improvement of existing ones.

The Clinton Education Initiative is part of a broader effort to improve the quality of education in the United States. The Clinton administration has committed itself to a series of reforms to improve the quality of education, including the implementation of the No Child Left Behind Act and the creation of the Department of Education.
