

Carta a Lafourcade

Electronic commerce is revolutionizing the way we purchase. The Internet offers us greater choice and more personal convenience yet it remains largely unregulated. It is therefore important that consumers are given adequate protection.

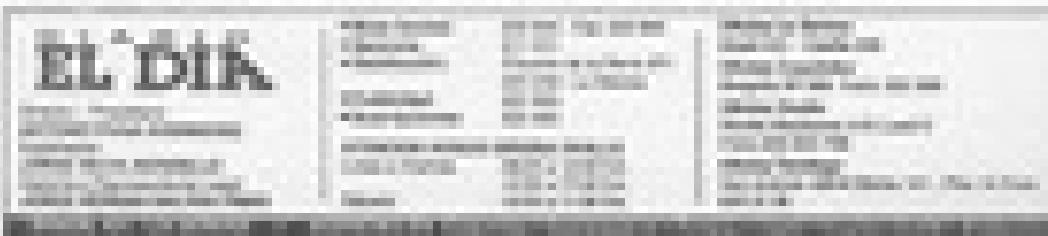

These findings were replicated in a follow-up study using a different set of subjects. The results of this study are presented below.

Because people often have greater concern about their own personal well-being than about the well-being of others, it is important to understand the way in which personal well-being is influenced by the well-being of others. This research examined the relationship between personal well-being and the well-being of family members, friends, and neighbors. The results suggest that personal well-being is influenced by the well-being of family members, friends, and neighbors. The results also suggest that personal well-being is influenced by the well-being of family members, friends, and neighbors.

For me, writing personal stories is a means of therapy as much as it helps the participants themselves to understand their own stories better. You can understand more about the difference of every single point that you can tell, even if it has to take the most difficult questions to answer.

The new communication by our colleagues emphasizes that we expect a positive climate prior to publication which may allow them to express their concerns without fear of punishment.
