

There is a large gap between the two, and the gap is widening. The gap is widening because the world is becoming more and more globalized, and the gap is widening because the world is becoming more and more interconnected.

1. The first of these is the fact that the majority of the population of the United States is now living in urban areas. This is a result of the process of urbanization, which has been going on since the beginning of the 20th century. The process of urbanization is the movement of people from rural areas to urban areas. This is done for a variety of reasons, including the search for better living conditions, the desire for education, and the need for employment. The process of urbanization has led to the growth of large cities and the decline of small towns. This has had a significant impact on the way we live and work. The majority of the population now lives in cities, which are often crowded and expensive. This has led to the development of new urban planning techniques, such as the creation of suburbs and the development of public transportation systems. The process of urbanization has also led to the growth of the service sector, which is now the largest part of the economy. This has led to the development of new industries, such as the computer industry and the entertainment industry. The process of urbanization has also led to the development of new social and cultural movements, such as the civil rights movement and the feminist movement. The process of urbanization has been a major factor in the development of the United States and the world. It has led to the growth of cities and the decline of small towns. It has led to the development of new urban planning techniques, the growth of the service sector, and the development of new social and cultural movements. The process of urbanization is still going on, and it will continue to shape the way we live and work for many years to come.
