RESEARCH DESIGN AND PARTICIPANTS

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

There is no doubt that the Commission's progress in 1990, 1991, 1992 is a remarkable achievement. It has been able to achieve a lot of work in a very short time. It has been able to achieve a lot of work in a very short time. It has been able to achieve a lot of work in a very short time.

These findings have important implications for the design of training programs for the use of the new technologies. First, the results suggest that training should focus on the development of specific skills and knowledge related to the use of the new technologies, rather than on general knowledge or theory. Second, the results suggest that training should be tailored to the needs of the specific user group, rather than being a one-size-fits-all approach. Finally, the results suggest that training should be ongoing and continuous, rather than a one-time event.
