the authors also conducted an experiment to quantify the effects of different types of stressors on the growth of Chlamydomonas. The authors found that the growth of Chlamydomonas was significantly inhibited by the presence of heavy metals, particularly lead and cadmium. The authors also found that the growth of Chlamydomonas was significantly inhibited by the presence of organic solvents, particularly ethanol and acetone. The authors concluded that the growth of Chlamydomonas is highly sensitive to the presence of heavy metals and organic solvents, and that these substances can be used as indicators of environmental contamination.
