The point of view is that of the author. It makes no claim to represent the views of the members of the Conference or of the International Institute. The author is responsible for the content of the article. He thanks the people who gave him comments on the manuscript, and especially Dr. John C. Polk and Dr. John R. Stoddard, former members of the Board of the International Institute, whose valuable suggestions were of great assistance.

It is not clear whether or not the "other" system is best described as "Bifurcating" or "non-Bifurcating". The main point is that the bifurcation is not symmetric with respect to the two branches.

It is not clear whether the new government will be able to gain control over the large-scale criminal organizations. The drug cartels are so well-entrenched that they have been able to penetrate the political system and influence many of the elected officials. It is also unclear if the new government will be able to effectively combat organized crime without the support of the military and police forces, which are often complicit in the drug trade. The new government will need to work closely with international partners to combat transnational organized crime.

was never to be within their walls. But the French government had a long time been desirous of making the Rhine a frontier river. This was first suggested by Baron Leopold von Metternich, minister of foreign affairs, in 1842, and adopted by the German Confederation in 1850. The project of a free port at Strasburg was then supported by the Prussian government, and was adopted by the confederation in 1853. The following year the French government sent a note to the Prussian Foreign Minister, expressing its opposition to the project.

and its members constitute the shareholders of the DFG. And the same shareholders are entitled to elect the members of the Board of Directors and the managing director. Therefore, the DFG has the right to nominate the members of the Board of Directors and the managing director.

and the appendix. Several species are difficult to be fitted into this model, and will be treated below. Species may be partitioned into groups by the "distance from the mean" and the "standard deviation". For instance, Chrysanthemum coronarium has a large mean and standard deviation. In contrast, Chrysanthemum coronarium has a small mean and standard deviation. The latter group includes the species with a small mean and standard deviation.
