Every year, the National Endowment for Democracy (NED) funds a number of projects in Central America. These projects are designed to support the development of civil society organizations, promote democratic values, and encourage political participation. The NED's work in Central America is part of its broader mission to support democracy around the world.

The following is a list of the names of the members of the Society of Friends, or Quakers, in New Haven, Connecticut, from 1651 to 1700, inclusive. The list is taken from the records of the Society, which are now preserved in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C. The list is incomplete, as it does not include all the names of the members, and it is not known whether all the names in the list were members at the same time.

de la Côte d'Ivoire et au cours de la guerre civile ivoirienne par le parti RDR.

Cette démonstration nous a permis de constater que l'opposition à l'ordre militaire dans les deux cas est étroitement liée à l'opposition à l'autorité de l'État. Considérant le rôle joué par l'ordre militaire dans la construction de l'Etat, il est alors possible d'expliquer pourquoi l'opposition à l'ordre militaire est étroitement liée à l'opposition à l'autorité de l'Etat. Par contre, si l'on considère l'ordre militaire comme un moyen de résistance à l'autorité de l'Etat, alors l'opposition à l'ordre militaire n'est pas nécessairement liée à l'opposition à l'autorité de l'Etat.
