to settle the dispute over whether the Crusades were to blame. Arguing in favour of Innocent, Papal Legate, he claimed that the Crusades had been the result of papal exhortation and excommunication of the Saracens, and that they had been undertaken for the sake of God and the Church. In response, the Emperor argued that the Crusades had been undertaken for the sake of the Empire.

It is also important to remember that the in vitro test results do not always correlate with the in vivo results.

Persons Pursued. Whether either of these two men are apprehended or not, it is difficult to say.
The man who committed the robbery is probably dead, as he was shot through the head, and the other is either still at large, or has been captured, as he was apprehended in company with another man, who was apprehended in the city of Philadelphia.

and the other two managers were asked the question "Is it right to make a profit from the people?". As you can see, the results are "Yes" with 51% and "No" with 48%. So, we can say that 51% of the people think that it is right to make a profit from the people.
