Dear Doris:

In my letter of February 3, 1967, in section 2 a I said: "This number could be reduced, if necessary, by eliminating poems that had no variants." The number of poems published originally in Desolación that have variants is 82. I append to this letter a list of these titles. I don't know if it is necessary to specify these in a contract. If it is, here they are. The total number of poems in Poesías completas... is 312. Sixty two is well under the one quarter figure (77.5) that you mentioned to me. You said on the phone that you thought that if only one fourth of the Poesías completas... was published it would not conflict with the Aguilar contract.

Very sincerely yours,

Margaret Bates
