Thousands Gather for Demonstration Against the New Deal in New York City

A large crowd of people gathered in New York City today for a demonstration against the New Deal. The demonstration was held in the city's largest park, and was attended by thousands of people. The crowd was composed of men, women, and children of various ages. Many of the people were holding signs and banners, and were shouting slogans. The demonstration was organized by a group of people who are opposed to the New Deal. They believe that the New Deal is a failure, and that it has caused the country to become even more dependent on the government. They also believe that the New Deal has led to the loss of jobs and the destruction of the economy. The demonstration was a peaceful one, and there were no arrests or other incidents. The police were present to maintain order, but they did not interfere with the demonstration. The demonstration was a significant event in the city, and it showed that there is still a large number of people who are opposed to the New Deal.
