There are two main types of in vitro fertilization: conventional in vitro fertilization (IVF) and intracytoplasmic sperm injection (ICSI). In IVF, the egg and sperm are combined in a petri dish, and the sperm is allowed to fertilize the egg naturally. In ICSI, the sperm is injected directly into the egg. IVF is typically used for couples with mild to moderate infertility, while ICSI is used for couples with severe male infertility or a history of failed IVF attempts. Both procedures involve the use of hormones to stimulate the ovaries to produce multiple eggs, which are then retrieved and fertilized in the laboratory. The resulting embryos are then transferred back into the uterus, where they will develop and implant themselves.

The 12,000,000-ton Egyptian iron ore export market is projected to be the world's 12th largest and will increase to 15th position by 2000. The Egyptian iron ore is 70 percent Fe₆₀ and 30 percent Fe₄₀ and is the world's 12th largest iron ore producer. There are no other producers of iron ore in the world except for Australia, Brazil, India, Russia, South Africa, and the United States.
